A victim may stay with the abuser for many reasons:

Fear
- Lack of physical protection
- Fear of retaliation against victim or family
- Losing custody of children
- Losing financial support
- Losing job
- Having nowhere to live
- Being alone

Social and cultural reasons
- Family tells victim to stay
- Family sees it as a private issue
- Abuse may be viewed as acceptable in some cultures
- Family tells victim to make the best of it
- Others won't believe the abuse happens
- Religious beliefs (that it is wrong to break up a marriage)
- Cultural beliefs (that it is wrong to get help)

Beliefs of victim
- Feels helpless to change the situation
- Believes things will get better
- Feels deserving of the abuse
- Feels sorry for the abuser

What is the battering cycle?
There are usually three phases to domestic violence, called the battering cycle. The cycle continues until the abuser or victim gets out.

Phase 1
Tension builds up. There is an increase in criticism and insults.

Phase 2
Abuser explodes into violence for little or no apparent reason.

Phase 3
Abuser apologizes and says it will never happen again. The abuser is often very charming and attentive to the victim during this phase, and promises to change or get counseling.

How are children affected by domestic violence?
Children are impacted by domestic violence, either by witnessing the abuse or by being abused themselves.

Phase 1
Abuser explains what he is doing. He tells the victim that he only did it because he is in love with her.

Phase 2
Abuser apologizes and says it will never happen again. The abuser is often very charming and attentive to the victim during this phase, and promises to change or get counseling.

Phase 3
Abuser explodes into violence for little or no apparent reason.

How are children affected by domestic violence?
Children are impacted by domestic violence, either by witnessing the abuse or by being abused themselves.

Beliefs of victim
- Feels helpless to change the situation
- Believes things will get better
- Feels deserving of the abuse
- Feels sorry for the abuser

What is domestic violence?
Domestic violence is violence or the threat of violence in an intimate relationship. This is often referred to as intimate partner violence. An intimate relationship includes couples, family members, and friends. Domestic violence is sometimes called "battering" or "wife beating." It's always abusive. An abuser is a person who uses violence to control another person. A victim is a person who uses the violence as the way to express anger or as a method of control. Domestic violence is never okay—no one ever deserves to be abused. It is never the fault of the victim.

What is the battering cycle?
There are usually three phases to domestic violence, called the battering cycle. The cycle continues until the abuser or victim gets out.

Phase 1
Tension builds up. There is an increase in criticism and insults.

Phase 2
Abuser explodes into violence for little or no apparent reason.

Phase 3
Abuser apologizes and says it will never happen again. The abuser is often very charming and attentive to the victim during this phase, and promises to change or get counseling.

What is abuse?
Abuse falls into three categories: psychological, physical, and sexual. An abuser may use any or all types to try to control the victim.
Children may experience physical problems resulting from emotional stress, including:
- headaches
- bedwetting
- rashes
- hearing or speech problems
- sleeping or eating disorders
- learning problems
They may also develop behavioral problems at school or at home or act withdrawn.

Develop a safety plan
If your partner is abusive, it’s important to develop a safety plan for you and your children in case the violence happens again.

Make copies of important papers including:
- social security cards
- birth certificates
- restraining orders
- bank account statements
- insurance policies
- your marriage license, if you have one

Hide them with a close friend or relative.

Hide extra clothing, money, ATM and credit cards, and an extra set of keys with a close friend or relative.

Open a checking account separate from the abuser.

Remove weapons from your home.

Set up signals with neighbors, friends, and relatives that will let them know you are in danger. A signal could be a code word to use on the phone to indicate trouble, or closing a curtain in a certain window. Ask a neighbor to call police if violence begins.

Identify a safe place to go, and practice how you will get there. Make plans to take your children with you. Prepare older children to leave and call police from a neighbor’s house if you can’t get away.

During an incident:
- Call 911 for help.
- Get out if possible. If you must leave without your children, come back with the police to get them.

If you can’t leave the situation:
- Avoid rooms with only one exit.
- Avoid the kitchen, bathroom, bedroom, and garage.

Computer safety
If the abuser can access your computer, they can find out what Web sites you have visited, what documents you have written, even what e-mail you have sent. The safest thing to do is to use a computer at the library instead of your computer at home.

For more information
Domestic violence is a serious health concern for you and your children. Please speak with your doctor if you are affected by domestic violence.

For help, please call:
- National Domestic Violence Hotline (interpreter services available)
  - 1-800-799-7233
  - www.ndvh.org
- Kaiser Permanente Consulting Nurse Service. Call 24 hours a day toll-free 1-800-297-6877.
- Northwest Network of Bisexual, Trans, Lesbian & Gay Survivors of Abuse
  - 206-568-7777
  - www.nwnetwork.org

The Kaiser Permanente Resource Line can provide information about community resources and support groups in your area. Call the Resource Line toll-free 1-800-992-2279.

You are not alone. No matter what your loved one has told you, abuse is not your fault. You have a right to live without being hurt.